Dear Students and Parents:

I hope this letter finds you happy and healthy.

Normally, this week would be the last week of school, but as I'm sure you're aware, not much about this year has been normal.

Firstly, I'd like to thank you for adjusting so quickly to the sudden change in how our school works. You have all been working very hard online, so I'm sure you're looking forward to your break in June.

This letter is to clarify how you will be graded for the fourth quarter. You will be graded for the online work you have done up until now, and then the work you do when you return in July.

We understand that you may have had difficulties studying during this time, so to make sure you get a well-rounded fourth quarter's education and the grade you deserve, you will be able to complete any missing work in July. You will also have the opportunity to redo any work you may have had trouble understanding during the online classes. Please see your teachers in July for either of these, and they will help you through your work.

Once again, thank you for your dedication during these unusual times. We still have a long way to go, and we can only get through this if we work together.

Thank you for your understanding and support.

Sincerely,

Francis J. G. Sherwood
Head, Middle School
